of the troops of the troops of the troops of the troops of the troops, the sale of the troops of the troops, the sale of the troops of the troops, the sale of the troops of the of officers having resigned in protest against being called upon to take part in the coercion of Ulster. This looks serious upon the face of it, although statements by the Government appear to have led the officers to reconsider their decision. There is no doubt that the Government is face to face with a their decision. There is no doubt that the Government is face to face with a serious state of affairs, but the conciliatory attitude assumed by Premier Asquith leads to the hope that the situation will soon be relieved, and that all this military preparation will go for nothing. One cannot help believing that much of the opposition to decrease the government's programment of covernment's programment. Who doubt the contract of the covernment of the covernment
